Kevin McIntyre is the founder of Speaker's Source, a professional development communication consultancy that equips leaders to transform their speaking skills, igniting an enhanced ability to optimize business results.

His clients include:

- Board members
- CEOs
- Senior and Executive leaders
- Emerging leaders
- Military leaders
- Non-Profits
- Government leaders
- Healthcare leaders

Before devoting fulltime to clients through Speaker's Source, he was an Air Force Officer with co-leadership responsibilities for 3,500 troops. While serving part-time in the Air National Guard, he worked in the private sector, serving as a project manager and trainer for FEMA, IBM, Allscripts, and more. He has consulted with clients ranging from emerging, mid-level, and executive levels of leadership.

He has delivered keynotes, breakout session speeches, product demonstrations, presentations at conferences to government leaders, including congressional delegations and company boards.

Kevin specializes in helping his clients find their most powerful voice using his unique methodology, his proprietary 3 & 3 Principle™, and other technologies to gain the kind of persuasive engagement that garners business results.

He has worked with thousands of leaders across multiple industries and fields, including operations, financial institutions, supply chain, healthcare, marketing, technology, and even academics. This spectrum of experiences helps him work cross-functionally to grow leaders, teams and enhance performance.

Early in Kevin's career, he recognized the critical role good communication skills played in organizational success. He has devoted his professional life to equipping leaders with these skills to optimize every opportunity to speak no matter the occasion or size of the audience.
